

Multi-Channel Outreach Assets — FirstKnock.online

FirstKnock.online Multi-Channel Outreach Assets Memo

This memo outlines a production-ready, multi-channel outreach cadence designed to rapidly scale FirstKnock.online's user base among small field sales operations. By leveraging these precisely engineered LinkedIn sequences, cold call scripts, and objection-handling frameworks, your revenue team can effectively engage founders and VPs to maximize demo bookings and pipeline generation.

Product:FirstKnock.online — CRM + GPS territory mapping for D2D & field sales teamsContact: firstknockhelp@gmail.comTarget:Owners/Founders + VP Sales of small field sales operations (solar, roofing, pest control, telecom, HVAC)

PART 1: LINKEDIN OUTREACH SEQUENCE

Connection Request Message

(Under 300 characters — no pitch, just relevance)

Version A (hiring signal trigger):

Hi [FIRST_NAME] — saw [COMPANY_NAME] is scaling your D2D team in [LOCATION]. I work with [INDUSTRY] operators on territory mapping. Would love to connect.

Version B (mutual interest):

Hi [FIRST_NAME] — fellow field sales nerd here. Building tools for D2D teams and love what [COMPANY_NAME] is doing in [LOCATION]. Would be great to connect.

Version C (direct/founder-to-founder):

Hi [FIRST_NAME] — I'm the founder of FirstKnock, a territory mapping tool for D2D teams. Noticed [COMPANY_NAME] runs field reps in [LOCATION] — thought we might have something worth a quick chat about.

Best practice:Version A performs best when triggered by a hiring signal (prospect posted a job for field reps). Version C works well for founder-to-founder outreach at companies under 20 employees.

LinkedIn Follow-Up Message 1 — After Connection Accepted

(Send 1–2 days after connection accepted. Conversational, no hard pitch.)

Hey [FIRST_NAME], thanks for connecting! Quick question — when your reps finish a day in the field, how are you tracking which doors got knocked and making sure nobody's doubling up on the same streets? I ask because most [INDUSTRY] operators I talk to are still doing it with paper logs or group texts, and it creates a real mess at scale. Curious how [COMPANY_NAME] handles it — no agenda, just genuinely interested.

Strategic note: This mirrors Email 1's soft curiosity approach. The goal is a reply, not a demo booking. If they respond with "we use [TOOL]" — that's gold. If they say "it's a mess" — move to Message 2.

LinkedIn Follow-Up Message 2 — After Reply or 5 Days No Reply

(Agitate + introduce FirstKnock briefly)

[FIRST_NAME] — appreciate you sharing that. We built FirstKnock specifically for this: GPS territory balancing so reps never overlap, live knock logging that works offline, and compliance tracking for local canvassing ordinances. Teams typically cut windshield time by 30% in the first 30 days. Would a 15-minute screen share make sense? I can pull up what [COMPANY_NAME]'s territory map would look like in [LOCATION] — no prep needed on your end.

If no reply to Message 1, use this opener instead:

Hey [FIRST_NAME] — following up on my earlier question about territory tracking. Wanted to share something quick that might be relevant for [COMPANY_NAME]... (then continue with the body above)

LinkedIn Follow-Up Message 3 — Final Touch (7 Days After Message 2)

(Low-pressure close with a value leave-behind)

[FIRST_NAME] — last message, I promise. I put together a quick breakdown of what territory overlap typically costs a [REP_COUNT]-rep [INDUSTRY] team per month. Happy to send it over if useful — no strings attached. And if the timing's just not right, totally understand. Feel free to reach out whenever territory management becomes a priority. We'll be here. — [YOUR_NAME],
FirstKnock.online

Strategic note: The "free resource" offer (cost breakdown) creates a low-friction reason to re-engage. Even if they don't reply now, you've left a positive impression for future follow-up.

LinkedIn Profile Optimization Tips for FirstKnock Founder/Sender

Headline (under 220 characters):

About Section — Opening Hook:

If your field reps are still dividing up territories with paper maps, group texts, or gut instinct — you're leaving money on the table and burning out your best people. I built FirstKnock because I watched D2D teams waste 30%+ of their day driving to doors that already got knocked, arguing over territory lines, and scrambling to reconstruct knock logs for compliance audits. FirstKnock gives field sales teams real-time GPS territory balancing, live lead logging (works offline), and built-in canvassing ordinance compliance — all in one mobile app. If you run a solar, roofing, pest control, telecom, or HVAC field team, let's talk.

Featured Section: Pin a short Loom video demo (60–90 seconds) showing the territory map in action.

Activity: Post 2–3x/week about D2D sales ops, territory management tips, and field sales compliance updates. This warms your profile before prospects check it after receiving your outreach.

PART 2: COLD CALL SCRIPTS

30-Second Gatekeeper Opener

Objective: Get transferred to the owner/decision-maker without triggering a “what’s this about?” brush-off.

*“Hi, this is [YOUR_NAME] calling for [DECISION_MAKER_FIRST_NAME] — is he/she available?
It's regarding their field sales team.”*

If asked “What’s this about?”:

“Sure — I work with [INDUSTRY] companies on territory management for their door-to-door teams. [DECISION_MAKER] and I haven't spoken before, but I have a quick question about how they're currently handling territory assignments. Should only take two minutes.”

Key principles:

- Use the decision-maker's first name — sounds like you know them
- “Field sales team” is specific enough to sound legitimate, vague enough to not get screened
- Never say “I’m calling to sell you something” — frame it as a question, not a pitch
- If gatekeeper asks if they're expecting your call: “Not specifically, but it's relevant to something they're working on.”

"Hey [FIRST_NAME], this is [YOUR_NAME] from FirstKnock — that's F-I-R-S-T-K-N-O-C-K dot online. I work with [INDUSTRY] companies that run door-to-door teams, and I had a quick question about how [COMPANY_NAME] handles territory assignments between reps. Most operators I talk to are dealing with overlap issues and windshield time waste that's costing them a few thousand dollars a month — and I wanted to see if that's something on your radar. I'll also shoot you a quick email so you have my info. If it's relevant, great — if not, no worries at all. My number is [YOUR_PHONE], again that's [YOUR_PHONE]. Thanks [FIRST_NAME], talk soon."

Voicemail best practices:

- Always follow up with an email the same day (reference the voicemail in the email subject: "Left you a voicemail — [COMPANY_NAME] territory question")
- Keep total voicemail under 60 seconds — longer drops get deleted
- Spell out your company name and repeat your phone number twice
- Warm, unhurried tone beats scripted/salesy every time

Objection Handling Framework

"Not interested."

"Totally fair — can I ask, is it that territory management isn't a priority right now, or that you've already got a system that's working well?"

(Listen. If it's timing: "Got it — when would be a better time to revisit? Q3? After busy season?" If they have a system: pivot to "What are you using? I'm always curious what's working in the field.")

"We already have a system."

"That's great — what are you using? I ask because a lot of teams using [CURRENT_TOOL] still come to us for the territory mapping piece specifically, since most CRMs don't have real-time GPS balancing built in. Is that something your current setup handles?"

(If yes: "Awesome — sounds like you're covered. Mind if I stay in touch in case anything changes?" If no/partial: "That's actually the gap we fill — want me to show you how it works in 10 minutes?")

"Send me an email."

“Absolutely — I’ll send that over right now. Just so I make sure it’s relevant: is territory overlap or windshield time waste something your team is actively dealing with, or more of a background noise issue?”

(Get one qualifying answer before hanging up. Then send Email 1 immediately with subject: “Following up from our call — [COMPANY_NAME] territory question”)

“Too busy right now.”

“I hear you — I’ll be quick. Is there a better time this week, or should I follow up in [MONTH]? I can put a reminder on my end so you don’t have to think about it.”

(Always get a specific callback time or permission to follow up. “I’ll try you again” without permission = cold call again. “Follow up in 6 weeks” = warm call.)

Call-to-Meeting Conversion Script

(Use once you have the prospect engaged and curious)

“Based on what you’re describing, I think there’s a real fit here. Here’s what I’d suggest: let me pull up [COMPANY_NAME]’s territory in our system — takes about 2 minutes to set up — and I can show you exactly what your reps’ coverage would look like with FirstKnock running. It’s a 15-minute screen share, no prep needed on your end. I can do [DAY] at [TIME] or [DAY] at [TIME] — which works better?”

Key technique: Always offer two specific time options (not “when are you free?”). This forces a choice between two yeses instead of a yes/no decision.

DEPLOYMENT NOTES

Recommended multi-channel cadence (per prospect):

- Day 1: Cold email (Email 1) + LinkedIn connection request
- Day 3: Cold call attempt #1 + voicemail if no answer
- Day 4: Email 2 (if no reply to Email 1)
- Day 6: LinkedIn Message 1 (if connection accepted)
- Day 8: Cold call attempt #2
- Day 9: Email 3 (final email)
- Day 12: LinkedIn Message 2 or 3
- Day 21: Final “breakup” touchpoint — then move to nurture sequence

Tools recommended: Instantly.ai or Smartlead (email sequencing), PhoneBurner or Kixie (power dialer), LinkedIn Sales Navigator(prospecting + InMail), Clay(data enrichment + personalization at scale)
